

JOURNAL OF EDUCATION FOR INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

2007 Call for Papers

JEID is soliciting papers for upcoming issues. As a journal dedicated to the practice of education for international development, the journal welcomes articles that present relevant research, program descriptions and discussions of innovative practice. For 2007, the following topics are of particular interest:

Capacity Development: The wide range of capacities that are needed in education and training institutions, how they can or are being developed, and what the expectations are for the effects of this effort.

Complementary Education: Projects, programs or efforts that complement the education offered by national governments.

Secondary Education: The policy implications, national plans and efforts to meet the demand for secondary education, or describing programs or projects working on various aspects of secondary education.

Education Services in Fragile States: Education projects and programs working with fragile populations or in conflict/post-conflict settings.

Evaluation: The theoretical and practical questions of evaluation, on program and project evaluations and their implications and use.

Assessment: How governments and projects assess student learning outcomes

Visit the JEID web site <http://www.equip123.net/JEID> or contact the editor (JEID@air.org) for submission guidelines.

JEID is published by the Educational Quality Improvement Program (www.equip123.net) and the Education Policy and Data Center (www.epdc.org) with support from the U.S. Agency for International Development (www.usaid.gov).

JEID is an refereed, online journal for practitioners, designed to improve education policies and practices in developing countries, to stimulate economic growth and, reduce poverty.